

YANKS OVERRUN 17 WESTERN FRONT TOWNS

The War Today..

By DeWitt MacKenzie
AP War Analyst

THIS is Gen. Eisenhower's all-out offensive into the Rhineland, and the big news of the moment is that American troops along a wide front in the Dueren sector have forced the dangerous crossing of the flooded Roer river—last great natural barrier between them and the Rhine.

The assault has gone well. German resistance is increasing, however, as the enemy troops recover from the incapacitating shock of one of the most terrific and destructive preliminary bombardments ever seen. We must expect fierce fighting, for this is the showdown in the west.

As the U. S. First and Ninth armies break across the racing Roer—an amazing operation in which amphibious jeeps, assault boats and infantry bridges were used—the Canadian First army on the northern end of the front, and the American Third and Seventh armies on the south, intensified their assaults on the German flanks. Thus the entire battleline is flaming.

This offensive is what Field Marshal Montgomery a few days ago in an order-of-the-day to his troops in the north forecast as the "final round" which would continue without cessation until the "knockout." That aptly describes this great and crucial operation.

It has been stated, despite adverse weather conditions on the whole, in conjunction with the Red drive on the Eastern front. It may be the direct outcome of the decision of the Big Three in the Crimea conference to bring the Hitlerian war to a quick termination.

There are two prime reasons for forcing the issue. One is that the German war machine is definitely cracking, and now is the time for the kill. The other is that we also have the Japanese on the run, and we want a speedy clean-up in Europe so we can fling all our resources into the Pacific conflict.

Eisenhower is in far better shape now for this major operation than he was last December when Nazi Field Marshal Von Rundstedt interrupted plans for an Allied drive by launching his own ill-fated offensive which developed into the battle of the Belgin bulge. At that time Allied supplies weren't up to requirements, owing to lack of ports and transport facilities. The great harbor of Antwerp had just begun to function in a large way. Now, however, Gen. Ike is said to have all the materiel he needs, and a wealth

KEEP YOUR RED CROSS AT HIS SIDE

Through the Red Cross the American people serve the men of their Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard. This 1945 War Fund poster reproduction symbolizes Red Cross service with the Army.

Red Cross Emblem To Go Up In Salem's Home Windows

Alongside the blue and gold service stars, in hundreds of windows throughout Salem next week another symbol of service will be displayed—the Red Cross contributor's emblem.

Signifying families' participation in the 1945 Red Cross War Fund drive, the crimson cross will be distributed by 100 volunteers who will go from home to home, pushing toward this year's goal of $32,300.

Directing this part of the campaign, which opens Tuesday with Carl F. Willman as chairman and Eugene Young as his assistant, will be Mrs. Mary Brian as captain and a dozen women as senior leaders.

100 Women Will Serve

About 100 women have consented to serve under these leaders: Mrs. John Gerscht, Mrs. L. W. Knox, Mrs. Homer Elyson, Mrs. Chester Kirkbrooke, Mrs. A. E. Combs, Mrs. Kenneth Zeigler, Mrs. Sam Schaefer, Mrs. George Koonitz, Mrs. Vesta King, Mrs. Fred Koenreich, Mrs. Howell Williams, Miss Kathryn Gibson and Mrs. Marie Kaeppler.

To pave the way for this house-to-house campaign, the Boy Scouts under Eddie Howell this week distributed war drive pamphlets to homes throughout the city and posters to all stores.

These women workers, together with the men who will conduct the drive in other sections of the city, will meet Monday evening in the Memorial building to get supplies and hear a talk by Charles Carruthers of Akron, who served the last 20 months as Red Cross program director in Australia.

All will start out Tuesday morning to solicit contributions to the Red Cross War fund.

Contributors to this fund will receive the little lapel flag, symbolic of their alliance with the organization which now has more than 10,000 workers overseas helping to maintain the comfort and morale of the men and women on the fighting fronts.

Men overseas with the military are becoming more aware daily of the good that Red Cross is doing, and are writing home to remind their parents to donate to the Red Cross.

MARINES INCH FORWARD FOR TWO CONQUEST

Japs Resisting Bitterly Despite Concentrated American Attack

By ELMONT WAITE

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Guam, Feb. 24—Backed by a terrific bombardment from heavy artillery, aircraft and naval guns of fleet units offshore, Marines on Iwo Island opened their most concentrated attack of the six-day battle today but were only inching forward against virtually unyielding opposition.

The tank-supported attack was launched from the southwestern tip of the airdrome in the morning and by noon was making slow progress, Adm. Chester W. Nimitz reported.

Terrific resistance from Japanese weapons made every inch of ground gained a bitter, costly affair. The Marines appeared, however, to have reached the turning point in their conquest of the island, having taken Mt. Suribachi at the southern end of the island and now being engaged in mopping up operations against remnants of the garrison there.

Conditions on the beaches are generally improving and unloading of cargo is proceeding.

Japs Firmly Entrenched

At the island's south tip, after scaling Mt. Suribachi to secure their rear, the Marines dug out Japanese from pillboxes and blockhouses extending even inside the crater of the volcano. More than 700 have been killed.

Supplies on the beaches grew as the advance toward the island's center overran Japanese gun positions which had been shelling the shore.

A communicate covering action up to 6 p. m. last night said "in all sectors the enemy is resisting our advance from concrete pillboxes, entrenchments and caves."

The Nipponese are opposing the three Marine divisions with such modern weapons as 1,000-pound rocket mortars.

They are using deep pillboxes, linked by tunnels, which were year in the building and can only be knocked out by a direct shell hit, flamethrowers or a well-placed hand grenade.

Across a beachhead which naval authorities have admitted appeared doomed in the early stages, engineers have built roads under fire which are getting ashore the necessary equipment for bone-crushing blows.

The morning communicate stated: "The unloading of supplies is continuing and their rate of movement across the beaches is considerably improved in spite of the surf created by recent southeasterly weather."

LEASES HOTEL ON 10-YEAR CONTRACT

Announcement was made today of the leasing of the Metzger hotel, Gold bar, Silber bar and hotel restaurant to the Columbia Hotels, Inc., a newly-formed corporation which includes Chris Paparadis and James Anderson of Dallas, Tex.

The corporation, formed for operating purposes, will take over the management of the hotel here and Paparadis, who has operated the business for the past 25 years, will retire from active participation.

Anderson, who owns some 30 hotels throughout the country, will become the active head of the corporation. James Lyon will be manager of the hotel. The business has been leased from Paparadis on a 10-year basis.

Incorporation papers were granted by the state today.

Dr. Walker's Will Bequeaths Funds To Hospital, Red Cross

The will of the late Dr. Della Walker, retired Salem physician, has been probated in court at Lisbon, revealing substantial gifts to the Red Cross, Salem City hospital and the Columbia Presbyterian church.

The Salem woman who manipulated her families inheritance into a $103,500 estate, bequeathed $5,000 to each of the above charitable organizations.

The ten-page will, which was drawn by a Youngstown law firm in September of 1932, nominated Alice MacMillan, George S. Bishop and Harry W. Young as trustees of her residuary estate. Specific bequests of $5,000 each were given to George Bishop, Mrs. Clyde Wallace and James S. Smith. An additional $1,000 trust fund, was established in behalf of Anna Furbay.

Dr. Walker's residence and personal property were given outright to Miss MacMillan. The latter made her home with the doctor.

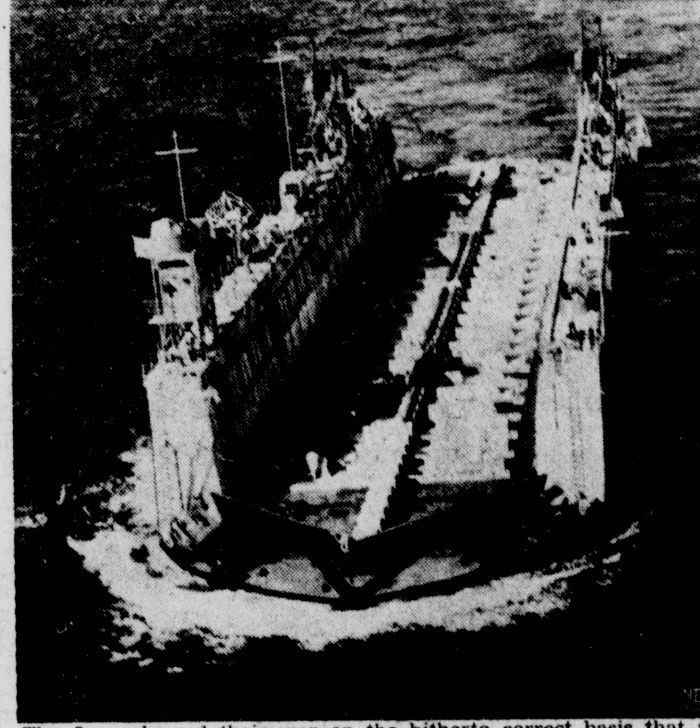

THE INCOME from the trust fund and any necessary part of the corpus of the estate were willed to Miss MacMillan. The trustees named are to receive any residue of the estate.

While no inventory has been filed, the application for letters of administration which have been granted to George Bishop and Harry W. Young, estimated the personal property to be $50,000 and the real property to be $50,000 and accrued annual rentals in the sum of $3500.

Miss Walker, one of the first and few women medical doctors in the county, died in December.

'Secret Weapon' in Iwo Assault

The Japs planned their war on the hitherto correct basis that a fleet could range only so far from its base before having to put back for supplies, fuel, ammunition and repairs. Uncle Sam crossed them up by creating a vast floating "base" which includes drydocks, floating cranes, "hotels," repair ships, bakeries, refrigerated warehouses and other units and employs over 12,000 men. This base extends a fleet's range by thousands of miles. Above is pictured one of the self-propelled floating drydocks which followed the fleet to Iwo Jima. Water is pumped into bulkhead compartments, sinking the dock floor below the surface. Ship needing service floats in, then compressed air empties the water tanks and dock rises, lifting ship high and dry.

BATTLE JAPS IN INTRAMUROS

More Atrocities Come To Light As Yanks Invade Manila Area

By FRED CAMPBELL

MANILA, Feb. 24—Three regiments of 37th division infantrymen fought from building to building inside the intramuros today, clearing the last Japanese from Manila amid tragic scenes of Japanese brutality.

Fierce fighting in this closing phase of the battle for the Philippine capital was announced by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, who disclosed American troops had invaded a second small island, Biri, to complete control of San Bernardino straits between Luzon and Samar.

Half-starved, bayoneted, beaten and raped civilians, held by the Japanese garrison inside the intramuros during the two-week American siege, were treated a field hospitals, but many non-combatant dead remained among the rubble.

The Japanese commander of the walled city had not replied to an American offer that he and his men would be permitted honorable surrender if the civilians were released.

Ends 3-Day Shelling

Three days of shelling the 20-foot-thick wall came to a climax early yesterday. In one hour 7,000 shells thudded into the medieval masonry.

The wall was breached in two places after this most concentrated ground shelling of the Pacific war.

PVT. ZECK, WOUNDED, VISITS FAMILY HERE

Pvt. Fred S. Zeck, 28, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Zeck of Jennings ave., wounded three times in action in Germany and now in this country for further hospitalization, recently concluded several days' visit here, accompanied by his wife and family of Elyria.

Pvt. Zeck's last injury, received in Germany on Dec. 3 while serving with the infantry in the Ninth Army, was the most serious. He suffered the loss of his left foot and a serious injury to one eye when he stepped on a land mine. Two operations on the injured eye have saved the sight.

His previous injuries were sustained Oct. 22 in Germany and Sept. 4 in France. Pvt. Zeck, arriving in the states Jan. 27, a year to the day after his induction in the service, was sent to Halloran General hospital in Staten Island, N. Y., and then transferred to Bushnell General hospital in Brigham City, Utah. He is on 30 days' furlough after seven months overseas.

The former Salem soldier was an employee of the Bendix Westinghouse Air Brake Co. in Elyria. Following his visit with his family he will return to Bushnell hospital.

A brother, Storekeeper Third Class Robert P. Zeck, is serving with the Navy in the South Pacific. His address is: Robert P. Zeck, SK 3 C, U. S. N. R., U. S. S. Triangulum, care fleet postoffice, San Francisco, Calif.

Wolfer's New Book Appears Next Month

"American Guerrilla in the Philippines," the story of Lieut. I. D. Richardson, U. S. N., by Ira Wolfer, will be published by Simon and Schuster on March 10.

Lieut. Richardson was one of the few Americans who escaped capture when the Japs overran the Philippines. He remained on the islands to become part of the guerrilla organization which sprang up almost spontaneously to harass the Japs.

The book is the chronicle of a war-within-a-war which never made the headlines but which helped make it possible for Gen. MacArthur to return. A digest of the book will appear in the March issue of Readers Digest.

Wolfer, ace war correspondent in the Pacific theater, will be the speaker at the Town Hall meeting at 8 p. m. Wednesday in the High school auditorium. He lived with the fighting forces on the Solomons and many other Pacific islands and will tell about his experiences in his talk here.

PATROL RADIOS TO AID FLOOD AREAS

EAST LIVERPOOL, Feb. 24—The state highway patrol has 50 mobile emergency two-way radio transmitters located between East Liverpool and Cincinnati for use in event of Ohio river floods, High Director Perry T. Ford said today.

This network would prove invaluable during disaster work if regular communication facilities were disrupted. Ford asserted in describing preparations for rescue work.

The patrol and other branches of the highway department are prepared to give maximum assistance to other state and local officials aiding in disaster relief, the director said.

Five Of 22 On Plane Survive Crash In Virginia Mountains

CEDAR SPRINGS, Va., Feb. 24—Five injured persons, including a courageous woman who walked barefooted for help, survived today in the crash of an American Airlines plane in which 17 were killed in a desolate mountain area of southern Virginia.

The survivors, taken to a hospital at Marion, were Mrs. Frances Ulen of Washington; Sally Padgett, stewardess, Nashville, Tenn.; Ensign Leonard J. Ricci of Meriden, Conn.; and Washington; Marine Lt. Erwin Schwartz, Syracuse, N. Y., and Ensign F. L. Mcdaugh, Los Angeles.

Discovery of the wrecked plane on the side of Glade mountain late yesterday afternoon ended a search by more than 500 persons starting soon after the pilot reported to the emergency landing field at Chil-

Are 19 Miles From Cologne In New Drive

[BULLETIN]

PARIS, Feb. 24—Gen. Eisenhower declared today the purpose of his new offensive was the destruction of the German army on the northern front west of the Rhine opposite the Ruhr—and that he expected to be able to do it.

(By The Associated Press)

PARIS, Feb. 24—United States troops fought within 19 miles of Cologne on the Rhine today in a huge two-army offensive ripping Germany's western defenses. They overran 17 towns and surged as deep as 3½ miles beyond the Roer river.

Infantrymen on the northern wing of a 22-mile assault arc were 12 miles from industrial Muenchen Gladbach and 24 from Ruesseldorf, on the Rhine below Cologne.

Bridgeheads from one to 3½ miles deep were firmly established on the Roer's east bank and 1,400 prisoners were swept up in the first day of the assault, launched at 3:30 a. m. Friday.

Troops crossing between galle Juelich and besieged Dueren captured Niederzell, 19 miles short of Cologne. The United States Ninth army's deepest surge toppled Baal, 12 miles from Muenchen Gladbach.

The American battle line was being pressed forward over the trench-slit Cologne plain against an enemy stunned by the first shock of the assault.

Berlin declared the full force of Gen. Eisenhower's push had yet to be reached, and that "40 Anglo-American divisions are thus far employed in the western offensive."

The German high command reported bitter fighting, but asserted the Americans had been unable "to penetrate to our main battlefield in major depth."

Counter-Attacks Fail

The Germans, staggered by tremendous shelling and hampered by the aerial sea-off of the battle-field, struck back with six counter-attacks which failed to halt the American onrush.

U. S. First army troops cleared one-fourth of Dueren, on the Roer's east bank 20 miles from Cologne.

But thick and strong defenses lie ahead. German resistance was reported stiffening.

Through the night more men and supplies were hurried across the flooded Roer river.

South of this breakthrough bid, the U. S. Third army seized 16 more towns and gained up to four miles along a 20-mile sector. Germans in northern Holland are pulling back to the IJssel river line from the Arnhem area north to the Zuider Zee, another front dispatch declared.

Doughboys of the First and Ninth armies, headed for the Rhine, were driving well beyond the Linlich-Juelich-Dueren road by nightfall yesterday.

Enemy Lines Spread Out

The push, presumably hatched at Yalta to coincide with Russian operations, seized all of Juelich except the citadel there, and enveloped Baal, Korrenz, Broich and Hambach in brisk fighting.

Six German divisions along the Roer front were spread too thin to halt the drive, but they were backed up by still powerful German forces. Some of these, however, had been sucked out of position by other attacks.

The Ninth army, pouring thousands of men over the Roer by nightfall, also captured Selgersdorf south of Juelich, Broich and Altenburg north of Juelich, and Glimbach, Genevich, Boslar, and Rurich.

Kempen and Oberbruch were taken. North of Dueren doughboys captured Daubentrath, Selhausen and Neiderzell.

The German counter-attacks fell in the Genevich-Glimbach area. So great were the shock of the American attack and the ruinous effect of the aerial sea-off of the battle-field that the first did not come until 9:30 p. m. last night.

Germany Unshakable So Hitler Declares

LONDON, Feb. 24—Adolf Hitler told the Nazi old guard today, on the 25th anniversary of the formation of his national socialism program, that Germany was an "unshakable community of people."

Berlin radio announced.

Hitler sent a message saying he could not be with the party stalwarts as "my sense of duty and work prevent my leaving headquarters even for a moment."

The German news agency DNB said Hitler's message was read by Secretary of State Herman Esler at the "festive hour held at Munich."

"Providence shows no mercy to weak nations but only recognizes the right of existence of sound and strong nations," the message said. It declared that without the "national socialist reconstruction there would neither be a German Reich nor a German people today."

McClain flew here yesterday with the first motion picture films of the battle and said he had never seen such a naval bombardment that preceded the attack.

A veteran of the North Africa and Normandy landings, he said he believed the first assault waves got ashore without heavy casualties because shelling drove the Japanese back from the beaches.

'Secret Weapon' in Iwo Assault

The Japs planned their war on the hitherto correct basis that a fleet could range only so far from its base before having to put back for supplies, fuel, ammunition and repairs. Uncle Sam crossed them up by creating a vast floating "base" which includes drydocks, floating cranes, "hotels," repair ships, bakeries, refrigerated warehouses and other units and employs over 12,000 men. This base extends a fleet's range by thousands of miles. Above is pictured one of the self-propelled floating drydocks which followed the fleet to Iwo Jima. Water is pumped into bulkhead compartments, sinking the dock floor below the surface. Ship needing service floats in, then compressed air empties the water tanks and dock rises, lifting ship high and dry.

BATTLE JAPS IN INTRAMUROS

More Atrocities Come To Light As Yanks Invade Manila Area

By WETTER-REUTERS

MANILA, Feb. 24—Three regiments of 37th division infantrymen fought from building to building inside the intramuros today, clearing the last Japanese from Manila amid tragic scenes of Japanese brutality.

Fierce fighting in this closing phase of the battle for the Philippine capital was announced by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, who disclosed American troops had invaded a second small island, Biri, to complete control of San Bernardino straits between Luzon and Samar.

Half-starved, bayoneted, beaten and raped civilians, held by the Japanese garrison inside the Intramuros during the two-week American siege, were treated a field hospitals, but many non-combatant dead remained among the rubble.

The Japanese commander of the walled city had not replied to an American offer that he and his men would be permitted honorable surrender if the civilians were released.

Ends 3-Day Shelling
Three days of shelling the 20-foot-thick wall came to a climax early yesterday. In one hour 7,000 shells thudded into the medieval masonry.

The wall was breached in two places after this most concentrated ground shelling of the Pacific war.

PVT. ZECK, WOUNDED, VISITS FAMILY HERE

Pvt. Fred S. Zeck, 28, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Zeck of Jennings ave., wounded three times in action in Germany and now in this country for further hospitalization, recently concluded several days' visit here, accompanied by his wife and family of Elyria.

Pvt. Zeck's last injury, received in Germany on Dec. 3 while serving with the infantry in the Ninth Army, was the most serious. He suffered the loss of his left foot and a serious injury to one eye when he stepped on a land mine. Two operations on the injured eye have saved the sight.

His previous injuries were sustained Oct. 22 in Germany and Sept. 4 in France. Pvt. Zeck, arriving in the states Jan. 27, a year to the day after his induction in the service, was sent to Halloran General hospital in Staten Island, N. Y., and then transferred to Bushnell General hospital in Brigham City, Utah. He is on 30 days' furlough after seven months overseas.

The former Salem soldier was an employee of the Bendix Westinghouse Air Brake Co. in Elyria, following his visit with his family he will return to Bushnell hospital.

A brother, Storekeeper Third Class Robert P. Zeck, is serving with the Navy in the South Pacific. His address is: Robert P. Zeck, SK 3-C, U. S. N. R., U. S. S. Triangulum, care fleet postoffice, San Francisco, Calif.

Wolfert's New Book Appears Next Month

"American Guerrilla in the Philippines," the story of Lieut. I. D. Richardson, U. S. N., by Ira Wolfert, will be published by Simon and Schuster on March 10.

Lieut. Richardson was one of the few Americans who escaped capture when the Japs overran the Philippines. He remained on the islands to become part of the guerrilla organization which sprang up almost spontaneously to harass the Japs.

The book is the chronicle of a war-within-a-war which never made the headlines but which helped make it possible for Gen. MacArthur to return. A digest of the book will appear in the March issue of Readers Digest.

Wolfert, ace war correspondent in the Pacific theater, will be the speaker at the Town Hall meeting at 8 p. m. Wednesday in the High school auditorium. He lived with the fighting forces on the Solomons and many other Pacific islands and will tell about his experiences in his talk here.

PATROL RADIOS TO AID FLOOD AREAS

EAST LIVERPOOL, Feb. 24—The state highway patrol has 50 mobile emergency two-way radio transmitters located between East Liverpool and Cincinnati for use in event of Ohio river floods, High Director Perry T. Ford said today.

This network would prove invaluable during disaster work if regular communication facilities were disrupted. Ford asserted in describing preparations for rescue work.

The patrol and other branches of the highway department are prepared to give maximum assistance to other state and local officials aiding in disaster relief, the director said.

Are 19 Miles From Cologne In New Drive

[BULLETIN]

PARIS, Feb. 24—Gen. Eisenhower declared today the purpose of his new offensive was the destruction of the German army on the northern front west of the Rhine opposite the Ruhr—and that he expected to be able to do it.

(By The Associated Press)

PARIS, Feb. 24—United States troops fought within 19 miles of Cologne on the Rhine today in a huge two-army offensive ripping Germany's western defenses. They overran 17 towns and surged as deep as 3 1/2 miles beyond the Roer river.

Infantrymen on the northern wing of a 22-mile assault were 12 miles from industrial Muenchen Gladbach and 24 from Ruesseldorf, on the Rhine below Cologne.

Bridgeheads from one to 3 1/2 miles deep were firmly established on the Roer's east bank and 1,400 prisoners were swept up in the first day of the assault, launched at 3:30 a. m. Friday.

Troops crossing between galled Juelich and besieged Duren captured Niederzetz, 19 miles short of Cologne. The United States Ninth army's deepest surge toppled Baal, 12 miles from Muenchen Gladbach.

The American battle line was being pressed forward over the trench-slit Cologne plain against an enemy stunned by the first shock of the assault.

Berlin declared the full force of Gen. Eisenhower's push had yet to be reached, and that "40 Anglo-American divisions are thus far employed in the western offensive."

The German high command reported bitter fighting, but asserted the Americans had been unable to penetrate to our main battlefield in major depth.

Counter-Attacks Fail
The Germans, staggered by tremendous shelling and hampered by the aerial seal-off of the battlefield, struck back with six counter-attacks which failed to halt the American onrush.

U. S. First army troops cleared one-fourth of Duren, on the Roer's east bank 20 miles from Cologne. But thick and strong defenses lie ahead. German resistance was reported stiffening.

Through the night more men and supplies were hurried across the flooded Roer river.

South of this breakthrough bid, the U. S. Third army seized 16 more towns and gained up to four miles along a 20-mile sector. German in northern Holland are pulling back to the IJssel river line from the Arnhem area north to the Zuider Zee, another front dispatch declared.

Doughboys of the First and Ninth armies, headed for the Rhine, were driving well beyond the Linnich-Juelich-Duren road by nightfall yesterday.

Enemy Lines Spread Out
Their push, presumably hatched at Yalta to coincide with Russian operations, seized all of Juelich except the citadel there, and enveloped Baal, Korrenzig, Broich and Hambach in briar fighting.

Six German divisions along the Roer front were spread too thin to halt the drive, but they were backed up by still powerful German forces. Some of these, however, had been sucked out of position by other attacks.

The Ninth army, pouring thousands of men over the Roer by nightfall, also captured Selgersdorf south of Juelich, Broich and Altenburg north of Juelich, and Glimbach, Genevich, Boslar, and Rurich.

Kempen and Oberbruch were taken. North of Duren doughboys captured Daubenhuth, Selhausen and Neiderzetz.

The German counter-attacks fell in the Genevich-Glimbach area. So great were the shock of the American attack and the ruinous effect of the aerial seal-off of the battlefield that the first did not come until 9:30 p. m. last night.

Russian troops wiped out the last German resistance in long-encircled Poznan and Arnsvalde.

Capture of Poznan shortened by some 50 miles the First White Russian army's communications with the rear.

The Russians stepped up pressure on besieged Breslau in an effort to reduce that German Silesian stronghold and free additional Soviet units for Marshal Ivan S. Konev's flanking drive on Berlin from the southeast.

Five Of 22 On Plane Survive Crash In Virginia Mountains

CEDAR SPRINGS, Va., Feb. 24—Five injured persons, including a courageous woman who walked barefooted for help, survived today in the crash of an American Airlines plane in which 17 were killed in a desolate mountain area of southern Virginia.

The survivors, taken to a hospital at Marion, were Mrs. Frances Olen of Washington; Sally Padgett, stewardess, Nashville, Tenn.; Ensign Leonard J. Ricci of Meriden, Conn.; and Washington; Marine Lt. Erwin Schwartz, Syracuse, N. Y., and Ensign F. L. McLaughlin, Los Angeles.

Discovery of the wrecked plane on the side of Glade mountain late yesterday afternoon ended a search by more than 500 persons starting soon after the pilot reported to the emergency landing field at Chil-

Japanese Resistance

On Iwo Jima, in Manila, at all the places where the Japanese have been brought to a showdown and at all the places where there must be climactic battles there has been or will be the same pattern of fanatic resistance.

Reading descriptions of the way the Japanese fight against often hopeless odds, cut off from contact with the homeland, frequently out-numbered, usually handicapped by inferiority in fire power and aerial support, even a civilian is able to understand what American fighting men in the Pacific mean when they say there is no resemblance to the enemy being gradually overcome in Europe. As warriors, the Japanese are creating a warrior tradition that will have a tremendous impact on future events.

The United States will be forced to deal with them on a basis of what it is learning about their belligerent qualities. The implications are revealed in crystallization of a conviction that even the Germans must never again possess arms, having shown themselves to be too dangerous and fanatic to be trusted—and the German tradition of blood and iron pales into insignificance compared with the tradition the Japanese are establishing.

When they have been defeated, their disarmament must be complete and permanent. Even in defeat they are able to exact such a heavy price that they may question the victor's claim of triumph. In their credo, the manpower they lose and maim is a small price to pay for their hope of ultimate success, if the victor grows careless. As the war continues, it may become evident finally that Germany has yielded its place as the nation most to be feared to Japan, which will establish in World War II the military tradition for World War III, if its enemies relax their vigilance.

War Criminals

Russian touchiness over speculation in the American press about the possible use of captured German generals to head a new government obedient to Moscow probably can be taken at face value. If the Russians are as realistic as they are commonly credited with being, the captured generals who have been exploited as propaganda weapons to weaken German morale will be disposed of when they are no longer useful.

Among Germany's many thousands of war criminals, the least likely to escape the penalty of death are high military officials. The possibility that the war trial fiasco that followed World War I might be repeated is alarming observers in the United States and Great Britain. Russia, which has sustained the greatest physical damage from German fury, perhaps has disposed of it by adopting a firm policy in advance.

It has been pointed out by I. F. Stone in PM that one of the 334 German war criminals whose punishment was asked by France at the close of World War I was Otto Stuepnagel, who turned up as a general in World War II and ultimately was in charge of the occupying forces in Paris, where he was shot and perhaps killed in protest against his brutality. Ultimately, of upward of a thousand German war criminals indicted, 12 were tried and six convicted. Most of the criminals, distinguished by their crimes, were marked for important duty in World War III. All this the Russians know; they had no part in the fiasco that followed World War I and it insults their war record to hint that they might be getting ready to repeat that mistake after World War II.

People in Circulation

The lot of a bureaucrat in wartime is not a happy one. Even the lot of a high official has its shortcomings. Take the recent announcement that baseball can continue this year if it minimizes its schedules.

Baseball is to be permitted this summer because it keeps people from riding on trains, the announcement explains. Whatever train-riding baseball players do is an investment to keep fans with money to spend from spending it on train rides. It is assured, in other words, that a large majority of persons who go to ball games make a decision between going there and going for a train ride and the baseball game wins the toss.

That is, at least, the apparent reasoning behind a statement by J. Monroe Johnson, head of ODT, but no one is going to blame Mr. Johnson for being silly. His job was to rationalize a decision already made: namely, to allow baseball to continue. It is going to continue because baseball operators and fans do not want it to stop and, unlike horse racing operators and fans, they can make a respectable case for their sport. It has nothing whatever to do with the behavior of people in circulation—people with war boom money to spend. Many of them couldn't be bribed to go to a ball game. Conversely, many who do go to ball games couldn't be bribed to take a train ride. The behavior of people in circulation with war boom money to spend is a problem for psychologists, not Washington officials.

Fruits of Victory

Return of United States military power to the Philippines, hailed as an important military move, also is an important economic move—a fact that stirs wry memories of the time when Philippine resources were so lightly regarded that it was deemed expedient to move them outside our tariff barriers.

Today, sugar, copra, Manila hemp and certain metals, whose loss will be felt keenly by the Japanese, are coveted for American use. The same expediency which caused them to be regarded as embarrassments in one decade assigns them extraordinary value in another; the United States needs them now.

The irony is that it needed them then, too—needed them as the Japanese needed them, but the Japanese were able to recognize their need. The ultimate political destiny of the Philippines is problematic, but their economic destiny has been clarified, not muddled, by the hard lessons of war.

The Stars Say

For Sunday, February 25
If It Is Your Birthday

SUNDAY'S horoscope reveals some very happy and promising situations, affecting the life, its felicity and good fortunes, with far-reaching and fundamental climax. Serious thought, efforts and sound planning for the future welfare and stability, may lay their keystone on this day, in which purpose the family, friends, associates and higher-ups may have significance. There may be change or travel in promoting career, romance or more festive enjoyments or celebrations.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of excellent openings for placing the future, its accomplishments, fortunes and happiness on a sound, secure and far-reaching basis for peace, contentment and worthy effort notable, acclaimed. This involves family, social, affectional and romantic affiliations or those catering to such happy foundations. Change, correspondence or travel, may be notable factors of celebrations or pleasure-seeking.

A child born on this day will have many practical and realistic ways and means of securing a worthy, happy and peaceful life, with many joys and satisfactions, charms and accomplishments.

For Monday, February 26

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for the advent of a sudden, startling and explosive event, which may prove uprooting, far-reaching and radical in effect. It demands swift, keen, clever and novel grasp of extraordinary situations in order to make the most of its drastic and dynamic precipitation. To lose the head, or act with confusion, bewilderment or unreasonableness, would invite danger and loss in many directions. But a sign of serenity, balance and good judgment, with ability to plan and execute sane tactics should avert strange crises. Keep calm.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of sudden and unprecedented events, which may cause dramatic, uprooting and dynamic situations, not calamitous if handled sanely, practically and with sound sense and reason. While there is a hint of confusion, alarm, haste, and unreason, being swept off the feet by sudden crises, yet an offsetting sign gives steadiness, poise, balance and security. Safe-guard health, possessions, work and exceptional openings for gain. Be careful with speech and writings.

A child born on this day will have extraordinary talents, ingenuity, constructive ability, with forethought, sound sense, realism.

GUARDING YOUR HEALTH

Nervous Indigestion, Its Causes

By HERMAN N. BUNSDEN, M.D.

NERVOUS, high-strung people are likely to complain of indigestion. They have a feeling of fullness after meals, a great deal of belching, sickness of the stomach, and, sometimes, vomiting. The use of sedative drugs may be helpful to these persons. If the indigestion is due to eating too much or, if it comes from eating too little, it will not be relieved by sedatives.

Another cause of these symptoms of nervous indigestion may be constipation. In such instances, the symptoms usually appear within six to twenty-four hours after the rectum has failed to empty itself properly. The material in the rectum may cause back pressure in parts of the intestine and thus produce excessive gas, bloating, loss of appetite, mild sickness of the stomach and a sort of hunger pain that is relieved for the time being by eating. In addition, there may be headache, a feeling of dullness and, in rare instances, vomiting.

Not Easy To Diagnose
It is not easy to diagnose the indigestion due to constipation, since the symptoms seem to be promptly relieved after the patient takes a laxative.

However, the frequent use of laxatives would not appear to be the correct treatment for the disorder, because the symptoms in some of the patients are due to this practice. Studies have been carried out which seem to show that in certain persons, even though several bowel movements occur each day, some material may be retained in the rectum, due to the fact that the rectum is stretched or distended. In these patients, symptoms of indigestion are likely to develop. Constipation which has persisted for only a day may even bring on hunger pains in a certain group of individuals. These pains often cannot be easily told from those caused by ulcer of the stomach. The patient says he feels as though he has gas on his stomach, and that he has to get rid of it by eating. Another symptom frequently present is excessive gas formation in the stomach and bowel.

In treating these different groups of patients with nervous indigestion due to constipation, it is suggested that an injection or enema of salt solution into the lower bowel will give almost immediate relief. A rounded teaspoonful of table salt in a quart of warm water is employed. Of course, proper regulation of the diet, formation of the right habits, the taking of plenty of fluids, and exercise should be used to correct the condition permanently. But for immediate relief, it is suggested that a salt solution enema is useful, and will not produce any harmful effects. Of course, enemas should be used under the direction of the physician.

CHAPTER THIRTY-FOUR

Aggie paddled fairly swiftly, although he was not hurrying. They were soon out of sight. Beth leaned back, trailed her fingers, absorbed the sun, and watched the man. "It's swell," she said, "of you and Sarah to offer to take me in."

He nodded. "We heard you were about to strangle Mrs. D. Hence the missionary invitation."

"You're funny. You have the most convenient ear in the camp. Everything you want to know, you find out. Like—Danielle's coming back."

"The knowledge was thrust upon me."

"Are you in love with Danielle?" He stopped paddling. There was a twinkle in his eyes. "Heaven forbid!"

Beth smiled. "That's no answer. Are you?"

"Not I. Not Agamemnon!"

"Well, you've thought about her a lot. Asked Sarah about her. Asked me, even."

"Just trying to figure her out," he answered. And he had been trying to assure himself that there was—or was not—a chance Danielle might have killed Jim Calder with her father's help. . . . The possibility had taunted him ever since she had gone back to New York with her father's body. Gone independently, sadly—refusing companionship or aid.

Beth watched him think. "Do you still wonder if she did it? She could have, you know, if she'd wanted to."

"Wes Wickman's satisfied that if he catches up with Hank Bogarty, he'll have all the answers. So am I."

"Soon Aggie smiled at her. 'Want to turn back?'"

"In a minute." Beth's voice had sunk so that it was difficult to hear, even in the drowsy quiet on the glassy water. After a pause, she asked, "Are you shy?"

"Why—yes, and no. Less so, every day."

"You know I'm kind of batty about you. Everybody else does. You're quite romantic, Aggie."

"There were rumors," he replied. "Jack told me—one night—that you were selling my stock above par. He said that you had been taken by my manly finger. It's misleading. I got this way doing hard work—not by the glamorous, athletic route of the boys in the advertisements."

"Yes," she said. "But it wasn't that."

He felt fearfully uncomfortable. "I don't expect to get married, ever. Beth. My work means too much. I wouldn't ask anybody to share the rough part—or to be alone while I went at it."

"Nevertheless," she said quietly, "I still—feel that way. And you can do whatever you like about it. It's funny—kind of—since I thought you were such a lemon when I first saw you!"

Aggie cast his eyes about, seeking a way to change the mood and the subject of their conversation. "It's nice to have somebody like you around." His gaze touched the place where Danielle's canoe had once been drawn up. "This is the second time I've been up at this end of the lake. Gives me a funny feeling—somehow."

Beth did not respond for a long time. Then she said slowly, "Yes. You were here with Danielle. I saw you come back—remember? She dumped you!"

"She'd gone ashore here," he said, as if he had not listened to Beth. "Wonder why?"

"Keeping another date with Bill—or somebody."

"I doubt it," Aggie answered. He turned the bow of the canoe toward the shallows. His eyes became inverted. Beth watched the change with a face as expressionless as his. He looked at her, for a moment. "Would you mind if I parked you for about twenty minutes?"

Aggie walked away from the shore. Beth took his place on the stern seat and commenced to paddle in random circles. When the woods had closed behind him, he ran. He had a long, light stride; his wind was good. Within six minutes he covered more than half a mile. The path forked away from the lake. Its branch was indistinct, like the old road down which he had hurried on his second night at Indian Stones. When he came near the abandoned summer house, he began to walk, and took care not to break a twig or let a branch fly back.

There was an opening. Aggie stopped at its edge, behind a tree. The pergola—or gazebo—was made of field stone, part toppled, all grown with vines. It stood on a grassy rise, overlooking a valley at the end of which were rugged, hazy mountains. He surveyed it before leaving his sanctuary: the remnants of an apple orchard which the storms had left, and the stone fantasy itself—a Victorian incredibility build for almost no reason and abandoned for the same cause. His thoughts, as if elevated by the rise of his breathing, came in a quick sequence. There were three of them:

One was the reiterated not that Danielle had said there was nothing at the pergola; but nobody, so far as he knew, had examined it to be sure.

The second was a feeling—a pang—at the forgotten spectacle itself, the place where he had spent so many days in boyhood games.

The third was an intuition—subtle—largely unconscious until that moment.

There was more mystery in this place than a huge theft. There was the mystery of death; the mystery of the man from the West. And he, Aggie, had the very sort of experience and training which fitted him to pursue an investigation of such things. His scientific career had been made up of deducing seemingly irrelevant facts from time-rotted fragments.

Plum came out of the woods, walking easily. There was no sound, no stirring in the pergola. The doors of the closet in which they had kept their games was rattled silently and from it had spilled the dolls Danielle had mentioned—faded, molly, half-familiar. A chipped checkerboard. A decayed archery butt. Some matting. A forgotten sewing basket. Modeling clay—or the box for it—and tiddlywinks.

Aggie sat down on the valley side, under a high stone arch. He remembered an apple tree that was gone, and another from which the top had broken away

CHAPTER THIRTY-FOUR

Aggie paddled fairly swiftly, although he was not hurrying. They were soon out of sight. Beth leaned back, trailed her fingers, absorbed the sun, and watched the man. "It's swell," she said, "of you and Sarah to offer to take me in."

He nodded. "We heard you were about to strangle Mrs. D. Hence the missionary invitation."

"Not funny. You have the most convenient ear in the camp. Everything you want to know, you find out. Like—Danielle's coming back."

"The knowledge was thrust upon me."

"Are you in love with Danielle?" He stopped paddling. There was a twinkle in his eyes. "Heaven forbid!"

Beth smiled. "That's no answer. Are you?"

"Not I. Not Agamemnon!"

"Well, you thought about her a lot. Asked Sarah about her. Asked me, even."

"Just trying to figure her out," he answered. And he had been trying to assure himself that there was—or was not—a chance Danielle might have killed Jim Calder with her father's help. The possibility had taunted him ever since she had come back to New York with her father's body. Gone independently, radically—refusing companionship or aid.

Beth watched him think. "Do you still wonder if she did it? She could have, you know, if she'd wanted to."

"Wes Wickman's satisfied that if he catches up with Hank Bogarty, he'll have all the answers. So am I."

Soon Aggie smiled at her. "Want to turn back?"

"In a minute." Beth's voice had sunk so that it was difficult to hear, even in the drowsy quiet on the glassy water. After a pause, she asked, "Are you shy?"

"Why—yes, and no. Less so, every day."

"You know I'm kind of batty about you. Everybody else does. You're quite romantic, Aggie."

"There were rumors," he replied. "Jack told me—one night—that you were selling my stock above par. He said that you had been taken by my manly finger. It's misleading, I got this way doing hard work—not by the glamorous, athletic route of the boys in the advertisements."

"Yes," she said. "But it wasn't that."

He felt fearfully uncomfortable. "I don't expect to get married, ever. Beth, my work means too much. I wouldn't ask anybody to share the rough part—or to be alone while I went at it."

"Nevertheless," she said quietly, "I still feel that way. And you can do whatever you like about it. It's funny—kind of—since I thought you were such a lemon when I first saw you!"

Aggie cast his eyes about, seeking a way to change the mood and the subject of their conversation. "It's nice to have somebody like you around." His gaze touched the place where Danielle's canoe had once been drawn up. "This is the second time I've been up at this end of the lake. Gives me a funny feeling—somehow."

Beth did not respond for a long time. Then she said slowly, "Yes. You were here with Danielle. I saw you come back—remember? She dumped you!"

"She'd gone ashore here," he said, as if he had not listened to Beth. "Wonder why?"

"Keeping another date with Bill—or somebody?"

"I doubt it," Aggie answered. He turned the bow of the canoe toward the shallows. His eyes became introverted. Beth watched the change with a face as expressionless as his. He looked at her, for a moment. "Would you mind if I parked you for about twenty minutes?"

Aggie walked away from the shore. Beth took his place on the stern seat and commenced to paddle in random circles. When the woods had closed behind him, he ran. He had a long, light stride; his wind was good. Within six minutes he covered more than half a mile. The path forked away from the lake. Its branch was indistinct, like the old road down which he had hurried on his second night at Indian Stones. When he came near the abandoned summer house, he began to walk, and took care not to break a twig or let a branch fly back.

There was an opening. Aggie stopped at its edge, behind a tree. The pergola—or gazebo—was made of field stone, part toppled, all grown with vines. It stood on a grassy rise, overlooking a valley at the end of which were rugged, hazy mountains. He surveyed it before leaving his sanctuary: the remnants of an apple orchard which the storms had left, and the stone fantasy itself—a Victorian incredibility built for almost no reason and abandoned for the same cause. His thoughts, as if elevated by the rise of his breathing, came in a quick sequence. There were three of them.

One was the reiterated not that Danielle had said there was nothing at the pergola; but nobody, so far as he knew, had examined it to be sure.

The second was a feeling—a pang—at the forgotten spectacle itself, the place where he had spent so many days in boyhood games.

The third was an intuition—subtle—largely unconscious until that moment.

There was more mystery in this place than a huge theft. There was the mystery of death; the mystery of the man from the West. And he, Aggie, had the very sort of experience and training which fitted him to pursue an investigation of such things. His scientific career had been made up of deducing seemingly irrelevant facts from time-rotted fragments.

Plum came out of the woods, walking easily. There was no sound, no stirring in the pergola. The doors of the closet in which they had kept their games were rotted entirely and from it had spilled the dolls Danielle had mentioned—faded, moldy, half-familiar. A chipped checkerboard. A decayed archery butt. Some matting. A forgotten sewing basket. Modeling clay—or the box for it—and tiddlywinks.

Aggie sat down on the valley side, under a high stone arch. He remembered an apple tree that was gone, and another from which the top had broken away leaving only a punk-filled trunk that supported an empty, giant knot, like a doughnut on a vertical fork, or a longnet with one rim and no lens at all.

Across from it was the old "Climbing tree"—gnarled and buckled but full of small green fruits. He looked into branches, trying to remember the route to the topmost. His eye held. One limb, some ten feet above the ground, was hacked, chipped, scarred and sliced.

Someone, Plum thought, walking over and looking up, had shinned the thick limb and hacked at the tree with an ax—an act without meaning. Then he saw that the bark had been marked by a narrower tool than an ax—a tool not much more than an inch in width—a tool like a chisel, or a knife. He turned around and looked back.

Opposite the battered spot, and somewhat higher from the ground, was the trunk that supported the knot-rim. He studied the marks again. They were deep, and beginning to heal over. They had been made before sap had flowed into the apple that year.

Aggie went slowly back to the pergola. He sat again. The empty knothole—the hard rim—was a foot across, and it stared down upon the incised bark of the opposite tree like any eye socket. The knothole and the old tree were perhaps twenty feet apart, the stump supporting the knot was a dozen feet high.

Ten minutes passed. Aggie unfolded his legs as if they were stiff, and walked slowly back across the field. He increased his pace as he re-entered the woods.

Salem Wins 15th In 18 In Season's Final Against Sebring

Rough And Tumble Battle Ends With Salem In Front 48-39; Officiating Ragged

In as rough and tumble a basketball game as many a Salem fan has seen in a long time, Coach Bob Miller's Salem Quakers completed their regular season with their 15th win in 18 games by trouncing a scrappy Sebring Trojan outfit 48-39 on the Sebring floor last night.

The two officials, men by the names of Scarr and Rogers, allowed the game to get entirely out of hand several times in the first half and twice in the last as players tumbled, rolled and fouled without any restriction whatsoever.

To say the whistle men were unfair to either squad would be an injustice, but the game was raggedly officiated and consequently failed to indicate the power and possible smoothness of either outfit.

Throughout the wild-eyed first half, it was nip and tuck. Sebring stepped into an early 5-1 lead and held the advantage until four minutes past, when a hooper from under the bucket by Mutt Schaeffer put Salem to the front 8-7.

Seconds later a Sebring foul shot tied it up, but after that Salem was never equalled. At the quarter it was 14-12 in Salem's favor. In the second the Quakers out-pointed their opponents 11-5 and led 25-17 as the intermission began.

Another hot third, which netted 17 Quaker points, put the locals far enough ahead to ice the contest. As the final started Salem led 42-27 and a slow final saw Sebring out-point Salem 12-6.

As the half closed a striking example of the officials' inexperience showed up. Ed Brunie of Sebring became riled over a foul called on him as the period closed and protested violently to the officials.

Scarr then ejected Brunie from play and refused to allow him to enter the game as the fourth period began. Then he permitted Brunie to enter the game as the fourth quarter started. The Sebring player had four fouls on him and legally could come into the game, except for the fact that a banished player is not allowed to re-enter the contest once he is ejected on the official's say so.

Another skirmish developed in the fading minutes of the fray as Walt Brian rolled the same Brunie over his back and onto the boards. Brian, somewhat perturbed, drew back and threatened Brian. A foul was called on the Salem center and he later left the game as Bob Payer replaced him.

Despite an obvious three man scheme to hold him down, Brian came out among the top scorers. He dumped through 14 points on five field goals and four fouls to equal the scoring feat of Ray Kelly, who turned in one of the best performances of his career.

The scrappy Kelly had collected five field goals, two of them on follow up shots that made him seem like a ball hawk as he steamed in under basket to rebound the oval through meshes.

Fighting like only he can, Kelly stole ball after ball from under Trojan noses and put up a scrap that had the fans marvelling at his stamina.

Brian's floor work and ball handling again reigned supreme, as he completely outmaneuvered Bob Sharpnack, Sebring center, who is highly touted as a defensive and offensive threat.

Although the Quakers missed Jimmie Appedisian, still out with a hand infection, the game of Norm Smith left little to be desired. The lanky senior lad, moved back to guard instead of forward, did a superb job and counted in the clinches.

Mutt Schaeffer, as dependable as ever under those boards, got his quota of five field goals and showed up superbly under heavy fire.

The old saying that it's toughest under basket was really in force last night as both teams struck out with body bruising roughness.

Schaeffer and Brian, however, controlled the boards most of the way and had little trouble getting the ball after shots by either team.

Only one substitute, Bill Stout, was used by Miller in the fray until the final minutes of the game, when Payer replaced Brian.

Although the contest was poorly played all the way through, the locals remained in their same offensive form and collected 15 of their 18 field goals from under basket. They made good on half of 24 foul shots.

Sebring got 11 of 15 field goals from underneath and made nine of 20 free throws count.

Thirty-one fouls were called and a host missed, a fact admitted by both coaches.

Unfortunately as the officiating was, Salem officials placed the blame for the affair on Sebring before the game started. Both Miller and Faculty Manager Fred Cope questioned Sebring officials regarding the men before the game and Sebring authorities were unable to show that Salem had approved either official, an act mandatory under Ohio Athletic association rules.

Coach George T. Sanford of Sebring admitted after the fray that both officials were ragged in their floor work and said it was unfortunate for both schools that better floor judges hadn't been chosen.

Batter Up!

SOMEWHERE IN GERMANY, Feb. 24—Pfe. Thomas W. Kennedy of Moravia, N. Y., threw a grenade at a German, who threw it back. Kennedy speared it on the fly and heaved it again. It exploded and with his fists broke the neck of the dazed, but still battling German. Kennedy has been recommended for a medal.

SALEM RESERVES, FROSH WIN FRAYS

Winning in a walk-away, the Salem Reserves chalked up their fifth straight victory last night at Sebring as they swamped a bewildered Sebring crew 40-13 in the second of two preliminaries.

In the first fray, the Quaker Freshmen squad made it a perfect night by edging the Trojan Freshmen 35-29.

Bob Payer, lanky Freshman star, pushed through 18 markers to pace the reserves to their victory. The victory gives Salem an 11-6 record for the season.

Cain led the first year men with nine points.

COLUMBIANA FINISHES PERFECT SEASON IN 87-43 BLAZE

BUCKEYES NOW IN BIG TEN, RACE AS THEY DOWN ILLINI

Ohio State edged back into the Big Ten basketball picture again last night by whipping Illinois, 60 to 44 to place the Buckeyes in second place with nine victories and two defeats.

Bowling Green was pushed out of the national basketball spotlight by bowing to Baldwin Wallace at Berea, 57 to 54.

Last Tuesday the Bee Gees had avenged their only previous defeat of the season by beating the Great Lakes Naval trainees, 64 to 59. They have won 22 games.

The Buckeyes, who play Indiana tonight in their season finale, must hope that either Illinois, Minnesota or Wisconsin bump off the league-leading Iowa Hawkeyes in order to share in the championship.

Playing one of its best games of the season, Ohio State handled all Illinois had to offer in the first half and then pulled away.

The lead changed hands nine times in the first ten minutes and with the score 12-11 in favor of State, Don Grate shot the team ahead with three quick buckets. At the half Illinois trailed, 27 to 16.

Arnold Risen, State center, was the leading scorer with 19 points. Bowling Green's defeat by Baldwin Wallace was no fluke. After B-W lost the lead at 45-43, but baskets by Don Swegan and John Popp put the Yellow Jackets ahead again. Although the Falcons continually threatened, the hometowners never relinquished the lead.

Feature of the game was the close guarding of 6 foot, 11 1/2 inch Center Don Otten of Bowling Green by Hank Ruskowski, Joe Casper guarded the other Bee Gee threat, Wyndol Gray, and held him to nine points until fouling out of the game in the third period. Gray ended with 17 points.

Popp led the winners with 24 markers.

Salem Wins 15th In 18 In Season's Final Against Sebring

Rough And Tumble Battle Ends With Salem In Front 48-39; Officiating Ragged

In a rough and tumble basketball game as many a Salem fan has seen in a long time, Coach Bob Miller's Salem Quakers completed their regular season with their 15th win in 18 games by trouncing a scrappy Sebring Trojan outfit 48-39 on the roomy Sebring floor last night.

The two officials, men by the names of Scarr and Rogers, allowed the game to get entirely out of hand several times in the first half and twice in the last as players tumbled, rolled and fouled without any restriction whatsoever.

To say the whistle men were unfair to either squad would be an injustice, but the game was raggedly officiated and consequently failed to indicate the power and possible smoothness of either outfit.

Throughout the wild-eyed first half, it was nip and tuck. Sebring stepped into an early 5-1 lead and held the advantage until four minutes were past when a hoopster from under the bucket by Mutt Schaeffer put Salem to the front 8-7.

Seconds later a Sebring shot tied it up, but after that Salem was never equalled. At the quarter it was 14-12 in Salem's favor. In the second the Quakers out-pointed their opponents 11-5 and led 25-17 as the intermission began.

Another hot third, which netted 17 Quaker points, put the locals far enough ahead to ice the contest. As the final started Salem led 42-27 and a slow final saw Sebring out-point Salem 12-6.

As the half closed a striking example of the officials' inexperience showed up. Ed Brunie of Sebring became riled over a foul called on him as the period closed and protested violently to the officials.

Scarr then ejected Brunie from play and refused to allow him to enter the game as the fourth period began. Then he permitted Brunie to enter the game as the fourth quarter started. The Sebring player had four fouls on him and legally could come into the game, except for the fact that a banished player is not allowed to re-enter the contest once he is ejected on the official's say so.

Another skirmish developed in the fading minutes of the fray as Walt Brian rolled the same Brunie over his back and onto the boards. Brian, somewhat perturbed, drew back and threatened Brian. A foul was called on the Salem center and he later left the game as Bob Payer replaced him.

Despite an obvious three man scheme to hold him down, Brian came out among the top scorers. He dumped through 14 points on five field goals and four fouls to equal the scoring feat of Ray Kelly, who turned in one of the best performances of his career.

The scrappy Kelly had collected five field goals, two of them on follow up shots that made him seem like a ball hawk as he steamed in under basket to rebound the oval through meshes.

Fighting like only he can, Kelly stole ball after ball from under Trojan noses and put up a scrap that had the fans marveling at his stamina.

Brian's floor work and ball handling again reigned supreme, as he completely outmaneuvered Bob Sharpnack, Sebring center, who is highly touted as a defensive and offensive threat.

Although the Quakers missed Jimmie Appedisian, still out with a hand infection, the game of Norm Smith left little to be desired. The lanky Senior lad, moved back to guard instead of forward, did a superb job and counted in the clinches.

Mutt Schaeffer, as dependable as ever under these conditions, got his quota of five field goals and showed up superbly under heavy fire.

The old saying that it's toughest under basket was really in force last night as both teams struck out with body bruising roughness. Schaeffer and Brian, however, controlled the boards most of the way and had little trouble getting the ball after shots by either team.

Only one substitute, Bill Stouff, was used by Miller in the fray until the final minutes of the game, when Payer replaced Brian.

Although the contest was poorly played all the way through, the locals remained in their same of defensive form and collected 13 of their 18 field goals from under basket. They made good on half of 24 foul shots.

Sebring got 11 of 15 field goals from underneath and made nine of 20 free throw count.

Thirty-one fouls were called and a host missed, a fact admitted by both coaches.

Unfortunately as the officiating was, Salem officials placed the blame for the affair on Sebring before the game started. Both Miller and Faculty Manager Fred Cope questioned Sebring officials regarding the men before the game and Sebring authorities were unable to show that Salem had approved either official, an act mandatory under Ohio Athletic association rules.

Coach George T. Sanford of Sebring admitted after the fray that both officials were ragged in their floor work and said it was unfortunate for both schools that better floor judges hadn't been chosen.

Batter Up!

SOMEWHERE IN GERMANY, Feb. 24—Pfc. Thomas W. Kennedy of Moravia, N. Y., threw a grenade at a German, who threw it back. Kennedy appeared it on the fly and heaved it again. It exploded and Kennedy charged the foxhole and with his fists broke the neck of the dazed, but still battling German. Kennedy has been recommended for a medal.

SALEM RESERVES, FROSH WIN FRAYS

Winning in a walk-away, the Salem Reserves chalked up their fifth straight victory last night at Sebring as they whipped a bewildered Sebring crew 40-13 in the second of two preliminaries.

In the first fray, the Quaker Freshmen made it a perfect night by edging the Trojan Freshmen 35-29.

Bob Payer, lanky Freshman star, pushed through 18 markers to pace the reserves to their victory. The victory gives Salem an 11-6 record for the season.

Cain led the first year men with nine points.

of manpower. His objectives are these:

In the first place, the Allied chief may be expected to try to force Von Rundstedt to give battle on the plain of Cologne where American tanks can be brought into play. The object of this strategy is to annihilate the German forces west of the Rhine. Sounds tough, doesn't it, but that's what war is—killing.

Next comes one of the most difficult operations of the war — the crossing of the Rhine, which will open the broad highway to Berlin. An integral part of this program is the destruction of the great industrial areas of the Saar and the Ruhr, which represent about the last of Hitler's war manufacturing.

What isn't apparent now is whether Marshal Von Rundstedt will accommodate his enemy by fighting before Cologne, or whether he will try to withdraw behind the Rhine.

The signs are that he may have little choice but to stand and fight. If the German intended to pull back of the river, he should have begun before this. To undertake it while in full retreat would be courting disaster, for he would be providing the Allied air forces with a field day. He is said to be bringing up tanks into the Cologne plain, preparing for combat there.

regiment then engaged in hand-to-hand combat with the near-crazed defenders.

The second battalion of the 145th regiment, moving under a smoke screen, crossed the Pasig river near its mouth in assault boats. The move caught the Japanese by surprise.

The Yanks poured through another breach in the wall. American artillery laid down a barrage ahead of the toughboys. An hour after the troops entered the first of the civilians began to trickle out. In a half hour about 30 civilians were huddled near the wall of Letran university.

By mid-afternoon most of the assault troops, including part of the 148th regiment, were within the walls. George Thomas Foster of NBC reported finding a large pile of dead Filipinos, hands tied behind their backs. The Japanese, he said, had tried to burn the bodies but failed.

The Intramuros was stormed at small cost to the Yanks. Maj. Gen. Robert S. Beightler, the 37th division commander who was oblivious to enemy machinegun fire as he watched the fight, figured it would take two or three days more to clean out the estimated 1,500 Japanese.

ITALIANS SOLVING MANPOWER PROBLEM

PORT CLINTON, Feb. 24.—Erie proving grounds, nearby laboratory of American guns and ammunition, isn't much concerned over the manpower problem, thinks to some extent Axis fighting men.

An Italian service unit composed of former war prisoners who volunteered to work for the U. S. has assumed many critical jobs at the proving ground, which has processed approximately 70 per cent of all artillery used by the army.

Col. F. E. Rundell, Erie's commanding officer, reported members of the unit were reconditioning anti-aircraft guns brought back from theaters of operations and training camps. Some 90 per cent of this work, he added, is done by the Italians under supervision of key personnel.

Inter-American Parley Backs Freedom of Press

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 24.—More than one-third of the delegations at the Inter-American conference have expressed support for the United States resolution on freedom of the press.

The resolution has these points: Lifting of censorship and wartime news controls as soon as possible after victory.

Freedom of exchange of information among the countries of the Western hemisphere and with other nations.

Freedom for correspondents to have access to sources of information without discrimination.

Rail Car Shortage

YOUNGSTOWN, Feb. 24.—Steel production in the Youngstown district may continue unchanged at 92 per cent of capacity next week, but a serious railroad car shortage is causing considerable concern. Plant executives say output may be curtailed soon because of a shortage of cars to ship finished products.

'Prayer Wing' of AAF Includes Folks Back Home In Membership

(By Associated Press)
CINCINNATI, Feb. 24.—The folks at home want to be "crew members" of the recently announced "Prayer Wing" within the Ferrying division of the Air Transport command.

Two weeks ago, Major Furman E. Jordan, division chaplain, announced formation of the "Prayer Wing," in which fliers and ground crews all over the world pray at least once daily for early victory.

Since the announcement, many letters have been received here from parents of boys in service for more information or request that they be allowed to enroll, Major Jordan says.

Typical of the prayers uttered, by the fliers as they wing their way around the world is one called an "Airman's Prayer":

"God of the evening, God of the dawn,
God of the morning, God of the light,
Keep our engines strong in flight,
And then, O Lord, let it be Thy will
That there come a day when we need not kill."

One of the letters came from V. L. McKinstry of Hyattsville, Md. Maj. Jordan said.

McKinstry enclosed a letter he had received from his flier-son, Vernon.

Young McKinstry described a crude altar set up before a map of Europe in the briefing room of his unit in England.

A gold cross on the altar, he wrote, appeared to men viewing it against the map "to be coming up from the very heart of Germany, symbolic of the thing Hitler was attempting to destroy. On either side, from England and France on the one, and Russia and Italy on the other, came white light radiated by the altar candles.

"This, to my mind, the flier wrote, "was the light of the Christian people moving rapidly back into darker Germany."

A few weeks after he received the letter from his son, Mr. McKinstry was notified by the War department that Lieut. Vernon Leroy McKinstry Jr. was killed in action in England Jan. 5.

A membership card to the "Prayer Wing" is enroute today from the Ferrying division to the elder McKinstry.

Leetonia Woman Awarded Divorce From Celebrant

LISBON, Feb. 24.—Common Pleas Judge Joel H. Sharp agreed with Maria Davis of Leetonia that her husband, Robert J. Davis, was a habitual drunk and awarded her a divorce in court Friday.

Mrs. Davis claimed that her husband had been on a "spree" at least twice each month since they were married ten years ago and on each and every holiday.

The plaintiff was awarded custody of the children while the defendant was ordered to pay for their support.

regiment then engaged in hand-to-hand combat with the near-crazed defenders.

The second battalion of the 145th regiment, moving under a smoke screen, crossed the Pasig river near its mouth in assault boats. The move caught the Japanese by surprise.

The Yanks poured through another breach in the wall.

American artillery laid down a barrage ahead of the toughboys.

An hour after the Yanks entered the first of the civilians began to trickle out. In a half hour about 30 civilians were huddled near the wall of Letran university.

By mid-afternoon most of the assault troops, including part of the 148th regiment, were within the walls.

George Thomas Folster of NBC reported finding a large pile of dead Filipinos, hands tied behind their backs. The Japanese, he said, had tried to burn the bodies but failed. The intramuros was stormed at small cost to the Yanks. Maj. Gen. Robert S. Beightner, the 37th division commander who was oblivious to enemy machinegun fire as he watched the fight, figured it would take two or three days more to clean out the estimated 1,500 Japanese.

ITALIANS SOLVING MANPOWER PROBLEM

PORT CLINTON, Feb. 24.—Erie proving grounds, nearby laboratory of American guns and ammunition, isn't much concerned over the manpower problem, thinks to some one-time Axis fighting men.

An Italian service unit composed of former war prisoners who volunteered to work for the U. S. has assumed many critical jobs at the proving ground, which has processed approximately 70 per cent of all artillery used by the army.

Col. F. E. Rundell, Erie's commanding officer, reported members of the unit were reconditioning anti-aircraft guns brought back from theaters of operations and training cramps. Some 90 per cent of this work, he added, is done by the Italians under supervision of key personnel.

Inter-American Parley

Backs Freedom of Press

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 24.—More than one-third of the delegations at the Inter-American conference have expressed support for the United States resolution on freedom of the press.

'Prayer Wing' of AAF Includes Folks Back Home In Membership

(By Associated Press)

CINCINNATI, Feb. 24.—The folks at home want to be "crew members" of the recently announced "Prayer Wing" within the Ferrying division of the Air Transport command.

Two weeks ago, Major Furman E. Jordan, division chaplain, announced formation of the "Prayer Wing," in which fliers and ground crews all over the world pray at least once daily for early victory.

Since the announcement, many letters have been received here from parents of boys in service for more information or request that they be allowed to enroll, Major Jordan says.

Typical of the prayers uttered by the fliers as they wing their way around the world is one called an "Airman's Prayer."

"God of the evening, God of the dawn,
God of the morning, God of the night,
Keep our engines strong in flight,
And then, O Lord, let it be Thy will

That there come a day when we need not kill."

One of the letters came from V. L. McKinstry of Hyattsville, Md., Md. Jordan said.

McKinstry enclosed a letter he had received from his flier-son, Vernon.

Young McKinstry described a crude altar set up before a map of Europe in the briefing room of his unit in England.

A gold cross on the altar, he wrote, appeared to men viewing it against the map "to be coming up from the very heart of Germany, symbolic of the thing Hitler was attempting to destroy. On either side, from England and France on the one, and Russia and Italy on the other, came white light radiating by the altar candles."

"This, to my mind, the flier wrote, "was the light of the Christian people moving rapidly back into darker Germany."

A few weeks after he received the letter from his son, Mr. McKinstry was notified by the War department that Lieut. Vernon Leroy McKinstry, Jr., was killed in action in England Jan. 5.

A membership card to the "Prayer Wing" is enroute today from the Ferrying division to the elder McKinstry.

Leetonia Woman Awarded Divorce From Celebrant

LISBON, Feb. 24.—Common Pleas Judge Joel H. Sharp agreed with Maria Davia of Leetonia that her husband, Robert J. Davia, was a habitual drunk and awarded her a divorce on court Friday.

Mrs. Davia claimed that her husband had been on a "spree" at least twice each month since they were married ten years ago and on each and every holiday.

The plaintiff was awarded custody of the children while the defendant was ordered to pay for their support.

"Welcome Stranger"

He had just moved to Salem, and the other day he came in to open an account. We offered such help as we could give, and assured him he could count on any further information or advice that might be useful.

"That's just what I was told," he said. "When I asked my boss where to do my banking, he said I'd like the FIRST NATIONAL."

This is the form of good-will advertising that is sought by every business house, and is one of the reasons for our steady growth.
